

How Can We Help You Improve Your Business' Bottom Line?

As proven experts implementing the latest CRM, ERP and Accounting Software in the manufacturing and distribution industries, we have made it the goal of our business to help our clients obtain the bottom line results their individual companies require.

Educate, Enable and Empower

For companies in the manufacturing and distribution industries, the ability to simplify their business operations is vital to their ability to succeed. XYZ Company will provide the consultation, technology and the project management tool that companies need to reduce their overhead costs and streamline their workflow.

What We Do

Does your company need a revamp of existing business systems? Do you have a technology project that is going beyond time and over budget? Are your costs out of control and productivity lagging?

When you contact XYZ Company, we take a hard look at the reality of your business operations and break it out into segments, to find out which aspects of your business process workflow need attention, and which are working as they should be. It is our intent to look at your operations, your accounting, your workflow and your technology and create a cohesive plan that will have your business running effectively and efficiently.

Our Process

Every company runs differently, and it is those processes specific to your business combined with your workflow goals that give the staff at XYZ Company the canvas we need to use our long history of business development, project management and technology to map out the path your company needs to follow to improve your bottom line.

Think of your business as a Lego block structure. Each block that is missing reduces the stability of your company. We can look at your overall operations and use our knowledge of the marketplace cutting-edge technologies to find the blocks that are missing from your overall business concept.

We will introduce the right technology tools to improve your operations, and then continue in a project management position as necessary to ensure ongoing smooth operations.

Our Experience

XYZ Company has a long and successful history of project management, business operations consultation and technology implementation and management within Manufacturing, Distribution, Service, Healthcare, Finance and Accounting businesses.

Principal, Brad Tornberg, is a successful technical and business expert with an MBA in Finance from Farleigh Dickinson University and. He holds Microsoft Certifications for Customer Relationship Management (CRM) sales, implementation and training.

He also has a series 6 and series 66 securities license and a New Jersey Life and Health License. He is well published having written many articles for The Practical Accountant and Distributors Edge.

With the right tools, business owners have the power to make the decisions they need to advance ahead of the competition. With ongoing business coaching from XYZ Company, business executives will have their finger on the pulse of their industry, so each business owner can focus their skill and expertise on building their business, not the day-to-day operations.